Transformative, But Inefficient

Social Media Doesn't Work Alone

Increase Social Media Success Through Cross- Media Synergy

Don't Think of Social Media as a Tactic

Think of Social Media as an Ingredient

A large outdoor chess set is positioned on a checkered board made of light and dark grey tiles. The pieces are white and dark grey. In the foreground, a large white knight piece is prominent on the right, and a dark grey king piece is on the left. Other pieces like pawns and a queen are visible in the background. The board is set in a park-like area with green trees and a red fence in the background under a clear blue sky.

Then New Social Programs.

Components of Inbound Marketing

A child with blonde hair, wearing a grey long-sleeved shirt and dark pants, is sitting on a wooden pier made of logs. The child is holding a long, thin fishing rod that extends upwards. The pier is situated over a body of water. In the background, there are some wooden structures and a boat, all slightly out of focus. The overall scene is bathed in a warm, golden light, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The text "Put Content Bait in the Water. Get Found." is overlaid on the right side of the image in a bold, black font.

retweet popularized the idea that companies in social media need a home base (Web site or blog), outposts (major customer engagement platforms like LinkedIn, Twitter, YouTube) and frontiers (lesser, experimental options like UStream, 12 Seconds).

But now, companies are starting to experiment with using Facebook as their social media home base, instead of as an outpost.

And why not? It doesn't matter what business you're in, your customers are on Facebook. Now rocketing past 200 million members (making it the 6th largest country in the world if it were a nation), Facebook offers online reach previously available only in Google and Yahoo flavors.

Come Home to Facebook

Vitamin Water tagged its NCAA basketball television spots with www.facebook.com/vitaminwater producing significant Twitter chatter in the moments following the commercial's first airing.

Before the commercials, Vitamin Water has approximately 40,000 fans on Facebook, and now has 259,663. Not bad, but the real ROI will come from Vitamin Water activating their fans, not just collecting them.

Retail clothing darling H&M is doing just that with a spiffy new Web site to Facebook integration that displays their Spring collection with engaging Flash animations on the corporate site, but asks visitors to click through to Facebook to comment on each item. Terrific synergy, and solid participation, with more than 100 votes and comments on each garment.
